

This world seems to be stressing the importance of diversity more and more each day. I have recently completed the process of applying to college and one of the main factors in the admission decision is diversity. They want a broad spectrum of student to represent a wide range of thoughts, personalities, ideas and beliefs. This is not just a point stressed in schools either. The workplace and society are pushing more and more towards a diverse culture. Why then would you want to allow one company to control all the media companies of one city? I request that you LEAVE IN PLACE the laws limiting ownership and cross-ownership of media outlets. I feel that in order to live in a diverse society, all aspects of that society must as well be diverse and this includes the media. I don't care to get my media from one central source that could be bias to any situation. I don't want just one media company infusing their single ideas and beliefs into my life with little choice for other media sources. It only seems normal that in a society so based upon the idea of diversity that we should also get our media from a broad variety of opinions.
